

DISTINGUISHING DEPRESSION

FROM THE DEPRESSED

PURPOSE

Paying attention to the status of key depression indicators is important for establishing, implementing, and modifying a client-centred action plan. Assessing the indicators in a consistent way keeps the counsellor in the know regarding where things started, how things are progressing, or how things are digressing. This allows planning for the right interventions at the right time and knowing when more support is needed or when light challenges would be more useful.
